H. The Interdepartmental Support Branch (IDSB) reports that the new Federal Automated Requisitioning System (FARS) has progressed to production stage. Both the old and new FARS systems are currently running parallel processing. When it is certain that all processing is running smoothly, the old FARS system will be disposed of. A beneficial feature of the new FARS system is that it has the capability to generate a list of items that are 30 days or more overdue. The first list has been generated from the new FARS and is currently being utilized by IDSB to clean up problems and check on overdue items.
